O. 79-PHENIX HALL, HAT AND CAP ESTABLISHMENT .- JOHN AR-NOLD having removed to his new store in the above building, would solicit a call from the public to examine his selection of the most perect articles of the London, Paris, and New York Fall styles, composing the greatest variety of HATS and CAPS ever offered in this market-remember also that this stock being direct from the manufactories can be sold as cheap as in any retail establishment North. Attention is particularly invited to ARNOLD'S NEW STYLE OF PATENT MOLESKIN ELASTIC HATS, which comprise every variety of texture and elegance, and have only to be seen to be appreciated.

In regard to the head gear for young men, a SLOUCH HAT is offered, which cannot be surpassed, and a sight of is sure conviction. The most beautiful assortment of CHIL-DREN'S AND INFANT'S FANCY HATS AND CAPS. But the greatest curiosity is the remarkable cheapness of all articles sold by JOHN ARNOLD.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE JACKDAW. Just before the death of Webster, as everybody will recollect, and after his recovery was despaired of, one of his physicians approached his bedside, and asked how he found himself. "I feel like the Jackdaw in the church steeple," was the strange reply. The physician withdrew sadly from the bedside to another part of the room, where some members of the family were standing together, and shaking his head confessed his apprehension that the brain of the dying statesman, was affected; that the stately oak was perishing at the top. He could see no method in the answer which his question had received. One of the ladies present, who knew Mr. Webster better, did not believe that his mind was wandering, and quietly stepping to his bedside asked him what he meant by saying he felt like the Jackdaw in the church steeple. "Why, Cowper; don't you remember?" was the reply. She did remember Cowper's delightful translation of led the Jackdaw, which we give below. There is a bird who, by his coat And by the hoarseness of his note, Might be supposed a crow; A great frequenter of the church, Where bishop-like he finds a perch, And dormitory too.

one of Vincent Bourne's little poems, enti-

Above the steeple finds a plate, That turns and turns, to indicate From what point blows the weather. Look up. Your brains begin to swim, 'Tis in the clouds-that pleases him, He chooses it the rather. Fond of the speculative height,

Thither he wings his airy flight, And thence securely sees The bustle and the raree show, That occupy mankind below-Secure and at his ease. You think, no doubt, he sits and muses Of future broken bones and bruises It he should chance to fall? No, not a single thought like that,

Employs his philosophic pate, Or troubles it at all. He sees that this great round about, The world, with all its motley rout, Church, army, physic, law, Its customs and its business, Is no concern at all of his, And says-what says he?-caw!

Thrice happy bird! I too have seen

And sick of having seen 'em,

Would cheerfully these limbs resign,

For such a pair of wings as thine.

Much of the vanities of men;

And such a head between 'em! The subjourned singularly beautful poem, attributed to the pen of the Quaker poet, Whittier, we find in the Atlantic Monthly:

TELLING THE BEES.*

Here is the place; right over the hill Runs the path I took; You can see the gap in the old wall still, And the stepping-stones in the shallow brook. There is the house, with the gate red-barred,

And the poplars tall;

And the white horns And down by the brink Fennel Seed; Powd. Jalap; Senna Leaves; just Of the brook are her poor flowers, weed-o'errun, Pansy and daffodil, rose and pink.

A veer has gone, as the tortoise goes,

And the June sun warm

And the barn's brown length, and the cattle-yard,

Heavy and slow; And the same rose blows, and the same sun glows, And the same brook sings of a year ago. There's the same sweet clover-smell in the breeze

Tangles his wings of fire in the trees, Sitting, as then, over Fernside farm. I brushed off the burrs, and smoothed my hair,

And cooled at the brook-side my brow and Since we parted, a month had passed-To love, a year; Down through the beeches, I looked at last On the little red gate and the well-sweep near.

The sundown's blaze on her window pane, The bloom of her roses under the eaves. Just the same as a month before, The house and trees, The barn's brown gable, the vine by the door,-

Nothing changed but the hives of bees.

Before them under the garden wall,

Forward and back,

I can see it all now-the slantwire rain

Of light through the leaves,

Went, drearily singing, the chore girl small, Draping each hive with a shred of black. Trembling. I listened; the summer sun Had the chill of snow; For I knew she was telling the bees of one Gone on the journey we all must go!

Then I said to myself, "My Mary weeps For the dead to-day; Haply her blind old grandsire sleeps The fret and the pain of his age away." But her dog whined low; on the doorway sill,

The old man sat; and the chore girl still Sung to the bees stealing out and in. And the song she was singing ever since Iu my ear sounds on --Stay at home, pretty bees, fly not hence!

With his cane to his chin,

Mistress Mary is dead and gone!" *A remarkable custom, brought from the Old Country, formerly prevailed in the rural districts of New England. On the death of a member of the family, the bees were at once informed of the event, and their hives dressed in mourning .-This ceremonial was supposed to be necessary to prevent the swarms from leaving their hives and seeking a new home.
